El Dorado Preps for Tough Battle Against Bobcats

Wildcat Coach Ponders
Over Way to Get Past
Hope's Big Line

BOTH TEAMS READY

Indications Are That Both Squads Will Be in Top Shape

ELDORADO — With two weeks under their belts, the El Dorado Wildcats breezed through a zippy scrimmage session Tuesday afternoon at Rowland field in preparation of meeting the most formidable foe of the season to date: Coach Fay Hammons' Hope Bobcats.

Fairly whole after playing a bang-up game at Hainesville Friday night, the Cats settled down to intensive practice with most of the boys in good spirits and ready for work. They probably will get it, for Coach Allen Reix, is already gloating over his charges' chances against the heavy Hope Bobcats.

The local mentor probably has good reasons for being gloomy, for Hope boasts an almost impenetrable line which averages about 200 pounds per man. Back of this line are some of South Arkansas' best ball throwers.

How his Wildcats will get past the line of scrimmage in the Hope tilt here Friday night will be the local coach's small amount of worry. In Hedges and White the local coach has two of the best running backs in the state, but he realizes that they have less than the proverbial "chance" unless they can break the heavy Hope line.

Done In Good Show

Coach Fay Hammons said Wednesday that he would send his squad through a long drill session during the afternoon, but that rough work would be held to a minimum as a precaution against possible injuries.

"The team is in good shape at present, possibly in better condition than any time this season," the coach said.

Jimmy Daniels, quarterback, has been practicing regularly and appears to be ready for the El Dorado game. His presence is expected to considerably strengthen both the offense and defense.

Coach Hammons said general admission to the El Dorado game would be 25 cents. Tickets can be purchased in the special train leaving Hope at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon.

El Dorado school officials telephoned that Hope fans could obtain reserve seats at 50 cents.

Fighters Write International Law for Selves, Beard's View

Whatever it is he has to say in his White House secretary, General Edwin Watson, President Roosevelt puts plenty of emphasis on it with that thumb and forefinger. The President is pictured after his historic speech opening the special session of Congress.

Roosevelt Phrase Is Nebulous, Says a Noted Authority

Beard Points Out International Law Vanishes During War

ALL NEUTRALS HIT

U. S. Also Jumped on Them After Declaring War in 1917

By CHARLES A. BEARD
Famous Historian
(Written for NEA Service)

NEW YORK — Among the slick phrases of the day is "international law."

The other day, President Roosevelt, in discussing repeal of the embargo on sale of munitions, declared that his objective is "a return to the principles of international law."

Now what does this mean? It is a veritable jumble of claims, assertions, treaties, pledges, and hot contentions. If it were definite, governments would not have to write endless notes about its meaning.

International law is not law in the sense in which we use the term "law" in our domestic affairs.

International law is not written down in any law books and no world court has the power to enforce it. The powerful nations of the earth are not agreed as to what it provides. Many of them break their own interpretations of this law and their pledges under it.

Where do we find this so-called international law? In big books made by governments, in the judicial decisions of various courts on specific points, in the thousands of notes which governments have written to one another during a period of two or three hundred years, and in the records of acts done to out another by governments in peace and war.

Little to Bank on In International Code

In this jumble of theories and practices only a few things are certain. For example, belligerents do not kill and eat their prisoners of war any longer. When a war breaks out, a belligerent does not shoot the ambassador of the enemy but makes sure conduct for him on his way back home.

These are among the things regarded as well "settled" under international law.

On the eve of the last world war, many rules for the conduct of international relations were regarded as well established and the United States operated on the theory that they would be obeyed by all belligerents.

Among these rules were the following "principles" which have vital meaning today.

1. A belligerent may lawfully blockade the ports of an enemy and stop all ships bound to or from those ports. To be lawful a blockade had to be "effective"—that is, enforced by belligerent warships stationed near the ports of the enemy blockade. The ships of neutrals that tried to run the blockade and were caught could be seized without violating any neutral rights.

2. Neutral ships carrying war goods (contraband) to any belligerent could be seized without violating any neutral rights.

3. Neutral merchant ships carrying only goods of peace (non-contraband) could be seized, or attacked by any belligerent on the high seas unless they resisted.

4. No merchant ships of neutrals or belligerents could be sunk by any reason without warning and without providing for the safety of crews and passengers.

Law Honored Until War Comes

These were among the great rights which the government of the United States has often asserted under international law. Most other governments had recognized them as binding. But after the last world war broke out, the warring powers on both sides violated most of these long accepted rules of international law.

Due to the submarine menace Great Britain could not make her blockade of Germany ports effective by stationing warships in the waters. So Great Britain declared a paper blockade, planted mines in the waters near the German ports, and seized neutral ships bound to German ports.

Claiming that conditions had changed, Great Britain increased the list of war goods (contraband) which could be seized on the way to Germany, and it included wheat, corn, and nearly every important article of food.

'We're So Sorry, Please, If This Bothers You'

RIO DE JANEIRO —(AP)— Part of $40,000 recently stolen from the city's custom house was found shortly after ward in a package which fisherman dragged up in Rio's harbor. Alleged thieves were seized. Said an advertisement in the newspaper A Notice: "A bundle containing part of the stolen money and flashlights with Gaillard batteries, manufactured by Regnier & Co., of Barra Mansa, was found at the bottom of the sea. One of the principal reasons for the success achieved by the thieves was undoubtedly their forethought in providing themselves with Gaillard batteries of incontestable efficiency."

Mustard Gas Is Evilest of War

One Touch of It and a Soldier Sees War From the Sidelines

By PRESTON GROVER
WASHINGTON — We have come upon some data about mustard gas that may arouse memories of World war veterans, particularly since it is pretty certain that the old burner will be used again on the French, English and Germans on the western front.

None of the countries now at war, not even the humane United States, has any idea of giving up mustard gas as a war weapon. In fact, United States military men, together with some of the chemical warfare experts of other countries, have been defending the stuff as one of the more humane ways of winning battles.

Casualties are high, but only a few of the casualties are going to die and only a few more will be permanently crippled. The same can't be said of bullets or a jagged hunk of exploding shell. Anyway, that is the contention of the gas warfare advocates.

As a gas, mustard is just about tops. Gas masks will keep the soldiers from inhaling—but that is only a fractional protection from mustard. That stuff soaks into clothes, burns little blisters at the slightest contact, and makes a hospital case out of even the mildest attacks. It can't be handled in a field dressing station, in the manner of a minor nick from a bullet or shell fragment.

Compound Interest

When a soldier gets a touch of mustard gas he is out of the war from 30 to 90 days—and perhaps for the duration.

The stuff grows on you. Each little blister fills with juice just like a burn. But the juice is not ordinary juice. When the blister breaks, the juice will raise more blisters where ever it touches. And these blisters make more blisters endlessly.

A tiny blister may form unnoticed under a soldier's belt. It breaks under the weight of his pack and runs down his thigh. A little chain of blisters forms. He is a sick man. He may try to keep on fighting, just to get another crack at the bloody business, but it is no use. He scratches the burn with his finger and rubs his face. Then little blisters start there and off he goes again.

Sprayed across a road the gas will

EXHIBITS FINISHED

Livestock Program Will Bring Out Big Crowd
on Thursday

The crowd on opening night was loud in its praises of the 1939 Hempstead County Fair. Everyone seemed to think it was far ahead of last year and the best since the palmy days of the old Southwest Arkansas Fair.

Wednesday night the Pet Show will be held at the main exhibit building. All who have pets to enter will be admitted free and may enter them Wednesday before 7:30. Winners will be decided by popular vote.

The finishing touches will be put on the exhibit building Wednesday. The poultry show is now complete and will be well worth a visit. There are nearly a hundred coops of fine chickens, which will be judged during the day. Dairy cattle were judged during the afternoon.

A Good Carnival

The carnival is unusually good this year. The rides are new and all shows and concessions look spick and span in their new tops.

Thursday is Livestock Day, when all livestock except dairy cattle and poultry will be judged. Seats will be provided to rail who would like to attend the judging, which will begin at 10 a. m. and continue until 4 p. m.

A BATTLE AT SEA

Germans Claim Aircraft Carrier Sunk — But England Denies It

BULLETIN
BERLIN, Germany —(AP)— The German high command announced Wednesday night that "Warsaw has capitulated unconditionally", and added that the "handing over of the city probably will occur September 29."

MOSCOW, Russia —(AP)— The Soviet government announced Wednesday night that the Russian steamer Metallist had been torpedoed and sunk by an unidentified submarine near Estonia.

PARIS, France —(AP)— The French artillery was reported Wednesday to have wiped out portions of the German Siegfried line between Metz and Saarbrücken, as the entire Western front blazed with heavy cannonading. Dispatches said the Germans had answered the bombardment with an intense counter-fire on the French advance positions in the Saar and Palatinat areas to protect Nazi troops working feverishly to rebuild shattered blockhouses.

Warsaw Holding Out
BUDAPEST, Hungary —(AP)— The Warsaw radio, describing a terrific aerial and artillery assault on the besieged Polish capital, Wednesday said British and France:

"We are still holding out."

The station broadcast a special message to the Polish ambassadors to Paris and London that although Warsaw "is razed" after almost three weeks of siege, "We expect aid will be forthcoming from our allies."

Surrender Offer Claimed
BERLIN, Germany —(AP)— Germany's supreme command declared Wednesday that Warsaw's defenders had offered to surrender, and that the Nazi air force had "successfully attacked" several British warships in the North sea.

The Warsaw garrison's surrender offer, the high command declared, came on the 20th day of the Polish capital's siege, "under the thrust of German assaults which carried the first line of fortresses in the north, and the second line of fortresses in the south."

The Polish commander, the Berlin communique said, "this afternoon offered to surrender the city and military force, and the German army commissioned General Johannes von Blaskowitz to conduct the negotiations for capitulation."

The communique said an airplane-naval encounter occurred in the middle of the North Sea Tuesday and that "besides an airplane carrier, which has been destroyed, several severe hits were scored on one battleship. Our planes sustained no losses."

In Berlin this was interpreted to mean that second British aircraft carrier was destroyed, but the communique did not name the vessel.

(The British aircraft carrier Courageous was torpedoed with a loss of about 600 sailor two weeks ago.)

Denied by British
LONDON, Eng. —(AP)— Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, told the House of Commons Wednesday a squadron of British warships was attacked in the North Sea Tuesday by 20 German planes but that none was hit.

"No British casualties were reported, but one German flying boat was shot down and another damaged," he said. "Another German aircraft came down and we sent a destroyer to collect her crew of four, who were brought in as prisoners."

In the meantime, Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, announced an increase in the income tax to 35 per cent until March 31 next, and to 37.5 per cent for the next full fiscal year.

MOSCOW, Russia —(AP)— Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop of Germany arrived here Wednesday for talks with the Soviet government and to discuss military pact was under consideration.

While We're Talking in Big Figures—

We have been talking in astronomical figures for some years, $45,000,000,000 national debt, $4,000,000,000 budgets, and the like. Now with the war on in Europe, millions pour out on the unproductive earth every day, and no one is alarmed or shocked.

But while we're talking in big figures, let's talk for a moment of the biggest figure of all—$200,000,000,000.

Two hundred billion dollars! That is the loss to the national income during the depression, according to a report just submitted to President Roosevelt by the National Resources Committee. That is the cost to the American people of the idleness of men and machines resulting from our inability to use to the full our vast resources during the past 10 years.

In other words, had we been able to contrive ways of employing all our idle workers, ways of keeping all our machines spinning at full speed, this breath-taking sum would have been added to the national income.

Beards that figure, the national debt looks small, and the cost of the World War could have been quickly absorbed.

Of course any such estimate of lost national income is a pretty theoretical thing. Neither machines nor men ever run without waste under any conceivable system of government. All this figure does is to point out to us rather convincingly our central problem. We must, whatever else happens, find ways of increasing that production, and decreasing that unemployment. We cannot forever continue to run a fine eight-cylinder engine on five cylinders and not expect strains and backfires.

Several of the countries of Europe have solved the problem by putting everything under military dictatorship, thus increasing the national production, all right, but dumping it right back into destructive war preparations, and now war itself.

That works for a time, but there is no future in it. Wars end. And when they end, back comes the problem, stronger than ever, of attempting to continue in peaceful, productive activity the pace set by the delirium of war time.

The problem must be faced, not by the cocaine-stimulation of war or even of a war boom, but in its basic aspects.

The National Resources Committee admits quite frankly that it doesn't know how to get this machinery going and these men to work. But neither does anybody else.

The basic thing to remember is that we must never lose sight of this fundamental lock barring the door to our future, and never for a moment cease trying to find the key.

Too Much Sugar, Rubbing of Face, Gland Changes Cause Skin Eruptions

Thirteen causes for skin eruptions like pimples and blackheads were found in a recent study made by specialists at the University of Pennsylvania.

In about one-fourth of the 1921 cases investigated there was found a family tendency towards suppurative conditions of the skin. In others, facial eruptions were traced to changes in human beings like the period of adolescence and the time later in life when sex glands begin to lose their functions. The change in glandular action is thought responsible for the skin troubles.

The condition of the skin commonly called acne begins with blackheads. These may be limited to the sides of the face and cheeks or may involve all of the face. Observers believe that head scratching and chin fondling speed acne.

There is a tie between the skin eruptions and the amount of sugar or fat taken into the body. All overactivity of the glands that secrete oil to the skin or danuffs may cause acne. Persons whose diets are deficient in various vitamins or who are constipated have a tendency to lowered resistance of the skin toward infection.

Since there are so many different factors involved, the control of acne is difficult. Chief purpose of X-ray in the treatment of this condition is to prevent overactivity of the glands in the skin. Much can be gained by controlling the intake of sugar and studying the water metabolism of the body. Also there is the necessity of making sure that the diet is well balanced and that the bowels are acting satisfactorily.

It is advisable to keep the skin thoroughly cleaned and to use antiseptic substances that will keep germs under control. At certain periods of life thorough study of the glands will determine whether or not they are functioning satisfactorily or whether the function of some of them is so greatly lessened that the effects on the body as a whole are bad.

It has been customary to regard pimples and blackheads as of little importance. From this study it can be seen that the skin is a mirror of the condition of the body as a whole.

As it travels 100 miles in a half-hour with the wind, the plane is making 200 miles per hour. But it goes only 120 miles per hour in taking 30 minutes to return against the wind.

Considering a calm the average between the force of the wind with and against the plane, we add 200 m. p. h. to 120 m. p. h. to get 320 m. p. h., and divide by 2 for an average speed of 160 miles per hour for calm flying.

"Meatless Days" Unlikely in 1939

Huge Surpluses of Food Are Available for American Public

By SIGRID ARNE AP Feature Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Remember those times during the World war when the family sat down to macaroni and cheese so that the work and beef could be shipped "over there?"

Remember how you favorite restaurant hid the sugar bowls and slipped you one lump of sugar for your coffee? When you ripped up the lawn and flowers and planted "Victory gardens" of vegetables?

American housewives seemed to remember only too well the first week of September this year. Some of them stood four and five deep at the grocery demanding 10 and 20 pound sacks of sugar.

But, says the Department of Agriculture, this country has a huge sugar surplus. There's no need for a price rise. Moreover there are surpluses of most major foods.

That's different from 1914. Then the war broke on an unsuspecting world. It was a tailored-made war, in the making for three years or more—right down to food supplies.

Our Own Carry-Overs

The world has huge surpluses of wheat and sugar, smaller ones in other foods, and the warping countries are supposed to have laid up big reserves.

Our food carry-overs for next year include 360 million bushels of wheat and 250 million pounds of food fats.

There are other changes since 1914 and several "ifs."

There's the diet change. Back in '14 we were meat-and-potato people. Now food chemists have taught us so much about vitamins and calories that our diet spreads over a wider range of foods. The whole world won't be demanding meat at once.

There's the change in farming. In 1914-18 the farmers jumped the size and number of farms to meet expected demands—and in the peak year of 1920 we were supplying Europe 50 per cent of her food. Our farms have never shrunk to the pre-1914 level. It should be easier this time to expand acreage to meet peak demands.

To Keep Prices Down

There's our own jealously guarded food plan. If worst comes to worst. It's part of the war plan which has been worked on since 1920. It includes a system of rationing that could be put into effect immediately. But it's such an unpleasant idea that officials hush-hush it. And anyway, the only rationing in 1914-18 was voluntary.

There's the new war resources board, already at work, to soften the economic shock that war always brings even to peaceful countries. That has a food division to meet profiteering.

Remember how the old food administration affected prices? Take flour. In the last peace year it cost $8.75 a barrel. By May, 1917, it was up to $17. Then the food administration was organized. By February, 1918, flour had dropped to $10.50 a barrel.

There's the change in European buying war supplies. England and France have pooled their purchasing. In 1914 they competed with each other in American markets and drove prices up by their haggling.

Of course, there are the "ifs." If we slipped on a strict embargo of all supplies to warring nations, prices might drop.

If we removed restrictions, the munitions industry might boom, men go back to work, and prices rise—as they always do in a prosperity cycle.

But anyway there aren't any "Meatless Thursdays" jitters around Washington.

Mustard Gas

prevent troops passing that way for a week or ten days at least. In woods or brush it may last several weeks. A mustard bomb dropped in an industrial plant would make casualties out of all who were sprayed by it, or who handled the machinery before it had been treated.

We've Got a Lot

If it happens to be scattered over an airframe, all planes touched by it must be put out of commission until they are specially treated. A badly soiled plane can hardly be recovered. The mustard gums up the delicate working parts in the dashboard mechanism.

The stuff can be washed away with lime by men wearing specially treated suits which prevent the gas getting to their skin. Doubtless it would delay operations in an industrial plant only a few hours.

The slightest residue remaining in the cockpit will start blisters on the pilot unless he is willing to fly in a gas-proof suit. That is uncomfortable. Such suits are airtight.

Taken to a hospital a soldier is put to bed. The little blisters are drained so the juice won't touch him. Caught in time—before the stuff gets out of hand—the effects can be cured, and the soldier put back in the dugouts.

And the gas isn't mustard at all. It just smells like it, and looks like it.

Uncle Sam knows where he can get a lot of it.

SERIAL STORY WORKING WIVES

BY LOUISE HOLMES COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday, Marian tried to laugh off the quarrel but Dan is grim, determined. When Marian told him to kiss her, he told her that he hated her because she has made him hate himself. He turns away without kissing her.

MARIAN was hurt and angry and, more than that, frightened. She asked herself rebelliously, "Must one go through life being frightened? First you're afraid of being poor, you do something about that and then you're afraid of losing your job. Then you're afraid of—other things—and finally you are losing your husband and it's a different kind of fear, hollow and helpless."

They spent the evening as usual. Dan read and played a few games of solitaire. He wandered restlessly about the apartment and eventually crossed the hall to Dolly's door.

Lying on the davenport with damp, pungent pads over her eyes, Marian indulged in an orgy of self pity. The old, dog-eared query presented itself to her. What had she done to deserve this?

Behind her lay conscientious effort and well-placed energy. Through circumstances, circumstances for which Dan was responsible, she had been cheated of a normal, happy life. She had been denied all the things which belong to a woman by right. Protection, easy living, pride in her man, security—most of all, security.

And now that she had adjusted her life to the circumstances, it was only to learn that she had deceived her purpose all along the line. The least Dan could do was to show appreciation for her endeavor. The least he could do was to be loving and sympathetic.

She had been horrid the night before, she admitted it. But did not all married couples quarrel on occasion? Hadn't she asked Dan to forgive her? Hadn't she ignored his childish behavior in stamping out of the apartment? Hadn't she, like a silly fool, asked him to kiss her? And had he done so? No, he had not.

For a moment her injured feelings were forgotten in a longing for Dan's kiss. She loved the feel of his mouth on hers, his kiss had never lost its thrill for her.

Once she had said, touching his lips with her fingertips, "I love your mouth, Dan—nice and hard and tender. I hate men with soft lips."

Dan had laughed, holding her close. "Ah—so you are a connoisseur of kisses. Are you making a collection, by any chance?"

And she, brushing his cheek with her lips, had teased, "I get around a little."

THAT was when the chart of their married life had many high spots, when even the low ones held contentment and love. Marian removed the eye pads and went across the hall. Dolly was at the telephone, her eyes bright, a pleased little smile on her lips. Dan did not look up from the evening paper. Marian sat down and idly turned the pages of a magazine. The magazine reminded her of the doctor's office and she threw it down. Dolly joined them.

"All the happy family," she said, giving Marian an affectionate pat on the shoulder.

"Did you say happy?" Marian asked.

Dan said nothing and Dolly changed the subject. "That was Randy on the 'phone. The party is growing."

Randy's party filled Marian with distaste. More effort, more wasted energy. "Sounds exciting," she said indifferently.

"He has asked Pete Thorpe and his new wife."

"Oh, really? I'll be glad to meet her."

"He knew that Pete and Dan were friends and he's been wanting to show the bride and groom a little courtesy because Julie was his secretary before her marriage."

"Hm—m—It's a small world," Marian mused. "Has she quit her job?"

"Oh, yes. Randy says she is the domestic type. Anyway, he doesn't employ married women."

"He doesn't? Why not?"

"Well—he doesn't believe in it."

"Is that so?" Her mounting anger except into Marian's voice.

"I didn't think Randy was like that, narrow-minded and smug, still playing with the idea that it's a man's world." Marian seemed to be forced constantly to defend herself.

"Women have a place of their own," Dolly said gently. "Randy thinks it's a very important place."

Marian frowned angrily. "What does he have to say about the women who are dependent upon themselves, and those who as husbands are not gainfully employed?" This with a baleful glance at Dan who did not appear to be listening.

"Do you really want me to tell you, Marian?" Dolly asked, "or shall we change the subject?"

"Of course I want you to tell me. I hope I'm big enough to see both sides of a question."

"Well—he says there wouldn't be married women dependent upon themselves if the men were allowed to do the earning."

"That's absurd."

"I don't think so. It sounds

Bruce Catton Says:

Congress Twiddles Thumbs, Awaits Embargo Repeal Bill

By BRUCE CATTON NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—For an extraordinary session called to meet in a period of "limited emergency," this congress is a surprisingly inactive body.

It can't take up the neutrality issue until the Senate Foreign Relations Committee reports out a bill, and the committee will not be ready to do that for several days. So far party leaders are following the President's request that action be confined to this one issue; which means that for the moment the two houses haven't anything to do.

How long this state will last is an open question, of course. Meanwhile, a great many of the legislators who hurried here for the opening session have gone back to their homes again. This is especially true on the house side. That body's plan is to convene once every three days as a formality and then recess without doing any business. Many congressmen can see no special point in sticking around just for that.

Congressmen On the Spot

A lot of them feel that they are more or less on the spot, though. As one middle-western congressman expressed it:

"The people back in my district are all steamed up about this emergency and they figure I'm down here at a critical time to help save the country. So if I go back home now they'll think I'm lying down on the job. But what earthly good would I be doing by staying here, as long as the house isn't doing any business?"

A number of congressmen have begged reporters not to publish the fact that they were leaving Washington, so that constituents wouldn't accuse them of running out on a crisis.

The mere fact that congress has come back into session has helped the atmosphere down here. Until congress returned, the general fatalistic assumption that "we're inevitably going to get into this war no matter how hard we try to stay out of it" was so thick in Washington you could cut it with a knife. Congress is so definitely in a non-warlike mood that that sort of talk has greatly subsided. This, any way you look at it, is an encouraging development.

Amateurs Present Crisis Solutions

While congress waits for something definite to work on, all sorts of volunteers are coming forward to help get the world out of its crisis.

One woman called the office of a leading isolationist senator and said she was willing to sacrifice herself to restore peace. Years ago, she said, she had offered the state of Massachusetts to let it elect her in place of Sumner and Van Zettie. Massachusetts had turned her down; but now she was willing to let herself be burned at the stake, in public, in England, France and Germany would call the war off.

Reds, Cardinals Split Twin Bill

Cincinnati Needs But One More Win to Clinch Pennant

CINCINNATI (AP)—Little Billy Myers' big hit advanced the Reds to within one victory of their first National League pennant in 20 years. Tuesday, his home run with two on base defeating the St. Louis Cardinals 3 to 1, in the first game of their double-header and made it relatively unimportant that the Cardinals took the second, 6 to 0.

It was that first game that Manager Bill McKechnie wanted. When it was in the bag, thanks to Myers' big blow and some stout-hearted pitching by the freshman star, Gene Thompson, Bill relaxed and took a flyer on the second game.

It probably was a painful anti-climax for the crowd of 34,194, who expected the Reds to close the race, when Bill nominated Lefty Lee Grissom to pitch the second game.

Walter Goes Tuesday

Especially after they saw the Cardinals' Grissom from the hill in the first inning, score four runs off him and his immediate successor, "Red" Barrett, and run the game right there. But it didn't bother Bill. He had saved his ace, Bucky Walters, for Wednesday and he expects Bucky to administer the knockout.

If the Cards had won the first game, McKechnie had intended to send his over-worked star into the second. But by gambling with Grissom, he was able to give Walters a three-day rest before sending him out after his 26th victory of the season. That's almost a vacation for Walters.

Then, if by chance Walters should bow to the Cardinals' Bill McGee Wednesday the Reds still would have the other half of their "big two," Paul Derringer, ready for the final with the Cards, Thursday.

Largest Crowd of Season

Tuesday's crowd was the biggest of the season and the noisiest. Hours before game time they were fighting to get in and when the available space was exhausted they were admitted to a new, unfinished section of the stand, where they sat contented on the structural steel.

Myers gave them the thrill they had come to see. In the second inning, with Ernie Lombardi and Harry Craft on base, he caught one of Curt Davis' fast ones on the nose and bounced it over the left field wall, the ninth home run of the year for the town's favorite slapper. That was the ball game.

After walking in a Cardinal run in the third, Thompson settled down to scatter four hits over the last six innings. He had all the Cards beat except Joe Medwick, who got two doubles and a single.

Cooper Allows Four Hits

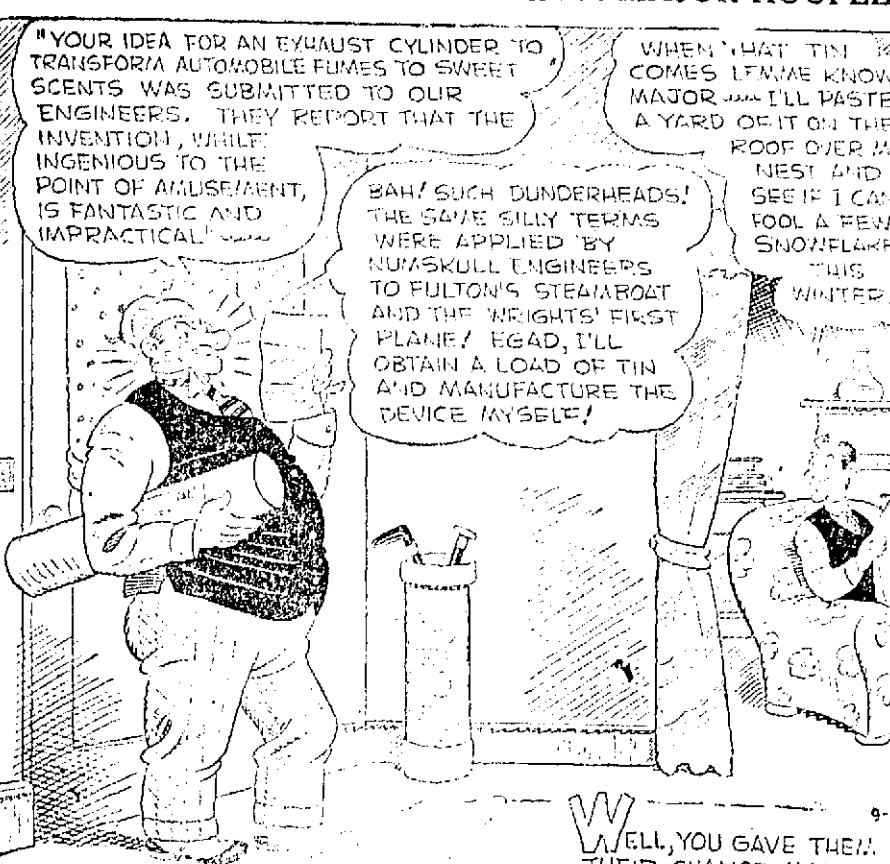

After bouncing Davis, the Red could do nothing with his four successors either, though Lombardi had a perfect game with a double, single and two walks. Though it didn't much matter, after his teammates had staked him to such a big early lead, Cooper

Styled for the Streamlined Forties

The Studebaker Champion for 1940, which made its appearance before local motorists this week. This is the two-door sedan model, styled by famous Raymond Loewy and built by the craftsmen of Studebaker's great South Bend factories. It is a six with 78 horsepower and surprising alacrity on either open road or in dense traffic.

Studebaker Champion for 1940 Now On Display at Archer Motor Company

The Studebaker Champion for 1940 made its appearance before local motorists today at the showrooms of Archer Motor Co., local Studebaker dealer, located at Third and Walnut street.

The Champion, youngest member of Studebaker line of cars and a newcomer to the industry last spring, is a gleaming, streamlined product from the drawing board of Raymond Loewy and the hands of Studebaker craftsmen South Bend. It is a six-cylinder car, free from excess weight, full of the liveliness that characterized its predecessor and the economical operation that made its predecessor famous.

The Champion prices start with a factory delivered price of $660, which is for the custom coupe. The car is produced in three body models, coupes, two-door sedans and four-door sedans, all of which are available in either custom or de luxe models.

The Champion's "big brothers," Commander and President models, will not be introduced to the public for another month, according to advice from factory officials.

Studebaker engineers have paid special attention to safety features in the new models. Visibility is excellent, there being a total of 2,058 square inches of exposed window area. Bodies are, of course, all steel, the frame is the strongest of any car of its weight, the center of gravity is extremely low and powerful hydraulic brakes give positive control at all speeds. The car is equipped with Studebaker's time-proven independent planar suspension.

In the Champion, Studebaker has reunited all of the no-bulk efficiency that earned this car so much attention during its introduction last spring. It was then and is now, a car designed anew and has no useless interior weight that characterizes "little brothers" in big families. The Champion weighs about 300 pounds less than cars of comparable price, thus giving its owners greater liveliness and gasoline economy than they can otherwise secure.

The Champion has made two remarkable record runs since its introduction—one a round trip across the continent and the other a 15,000-mile run at the Indianapolis Speedway. Both runs were made by the same standard production 4-door sedan.

On the first run, the Champion averaged 30 miles per hour and delivered 27.4 miles per gallon of fuel. The Indianapolis run gave the car all records for its class, the car maintaining an elapsed time average speed of 62 miles per hour, thus finishing the 15,000 miles in 14.511 minutes. It delivered 19.4 miles per gallon at this high speed. Both runs were made under strict supervision of the American Automobile Association.

The Champion has an overall length of 158 three-fourths inches. Its engine is mounted on five rubber at 3 points, has 164.3 cubic inch displacement and brake horsepower of 78. The compression ratio is 6.5 to 1. Externals are aluminum alloy and connecting rods are deep forged. The crankshaft has 1 large bearings as does the camshaft, the latter being driven by a camshaft gear.

WE, THE WOMEN

Because Europe is at war is no Americans to forget their manners. Yet on all sides you hear thoughtless people saying things like—"I hope that this war will wipe the Germans off the face of the earth," to one whose mother and father were born in Germany and who has relatives living there now.

"Well, don't worry. You'll look well in black"—to a young wife whose husband will be among the first to go should this country get into the war.

"I'm glad my boys are all too young" to the mother or father of a boy old enough to go to war.

"Is the old man who get us into war. It's too bad the old men aren't made to go first"—to a man too old to fight.

"Well, it's not our fight. Let them kill each other off over there. We should worry what happens to them" to anyone with the slightest feeling for humanity.

War Comes Close to All of Us

These aren't easy times for any of us that war wouldn't touch. We know that—and we're feeling scared and nervous and insecure.

It doesn't help a bit to have a friend or even a stranger make a remark so needless it hurts.

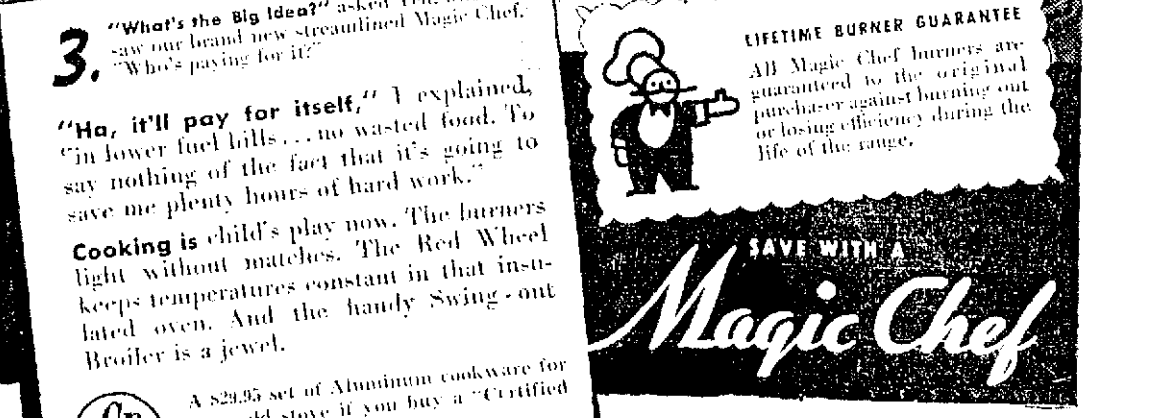

So let's watch our tongues these days. More carefully than ever, let us weigh our words before we speak. There is so little we can do. But we can be kind.

Admiral Byrd feels he will be safe in carrying on with his South Pole expedition. So far no penguins have reported sighting submarines in Antarctic waters.

Suffering Women May Only Need "Build-Up"

A simple method is saving many women much pain and discomfort. It is based on the knowledge that women's headaches, nervousness, and cramp-like pain often are symptoms of functional dysmenorrhea due to a week, run-down, under-nourished condition. So many women find relief from these painful symptoms through the CARDUI "build-up" is easy to explain. By improving the appetite, assisting digestion and assimilation, CARDUI helps to build physical resistance against periodic pain. Thousands of women also report that CARDUI, taken just before and during "the time," lessens periodic pain.

Announcing THE NEW 1940 STUDEBAKER CHAMPION

Out in front in eye appeal, roomy comfort, solid safety and long-lived economy!

THIS luxurious, distinctive new 1940 Studebaker Champion costs you no more money than you would spend for one of the other leading lowest price cars.

And when you own this Champion, you have the satisfaction of driving a car that's a fully accredited team mate of Studebaker's impressive Commander and President.

It has the same economy engine as the Champion that set an A. A. record of 27.4 miles per gallon on a 6,141-mile round-trip run from San Francisco to New York and back at 30.3 miles per hour average speed.

It has the same long-lived, expense-defying construction that enabled two Champions to travel 15,000 continuous miles each in 14.511 consecutive minutes on the Indianapolis Speedway.

Come in and go for a revealing Champion trial drive. You don't need a lot of ready cash to become a proud Champion owner—your present car should cover part if not all this Studebaker Champion's down payment on easy C. I. T. terms.

for a Champion coupe, delivered at factory, South Bend.
